LADY ANTEBELLUM: LIVE FROM THE ARTISTS DEN

The multi-platinum trio performs at the historic United Palace in Washington Heights. Surrounded by the rococo detail of the vaudeville theater-turned-church and cultural center, Charles Kelley, Hillary Scott, and Dave Haywood keep fans on their feet for their 12-song set that covers both their catalog of smash singles ("Need You Now," "Love Don't Live Here Anymore") and songs from their upcoming album, Heart Break, even adding a horn section for their funky new single "You Look Good."

VENUE BIO

The United Palace originally opened in 1930 as the Loew's 175th Street Theatre - the last of the five Wonder Theatres to be built in the New York metropolitan area. In 1969, United Palace was purchased and preserved by "prosperity preacher" Frederick J. Eikerenkoetter II, better known as Reverend Ike. Today, led by Reverend Ike's son, Xavier Eikerenkoetter, United Palace has continued to evolve its offerings of universal spirituality and creative expression through the United Palace House of Inspiration (UPHI), United Palace of Cultural Arts (UPCA), and United Palace Theatre (UPT). As a house of creativity and transformation, United Palace is unlike any other and is dedicated to communities local and global in pursuit of setting the mind and spirit free.
