Synopsis:
Treasures of New York: US Open explores the history of tennis in America, from the founding of the US National Championships in 1881, to the start of the Open Era and the US Open in 1968, through today as one of the most attended sporting events in America. The documentary will take viewers behind the scenes of the fourth and final Grand Slam tournament of the season, hosted by the United States Tennis Association (USTA), which takes place annually at the USTA Billie Jean King National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadows Corona Park in Queens, NY. Treasures of New York: US Open tells the tournament’s storied history through interviews with USTA executives, sports journalists and tennis champions, including Billie Jean King, Roger Federer, Katrina Adams, Gordon Smith, Donald Dell, Pete Bodo, Steve Flink and Mayor David Dinkins. The documentary comes in time for 50th anniversary of the tournament’s “Open Era,” with this year’s US Open beginning on August 27.

Notable Quotes from the Film:

- “The mission of the US Open is to put on the best tennis event in the world. We've been able to do that year after year. We're very bold, we're innovative. We try to add new things every year to make sure we're engaging our fans but making sure that we're taking care of the players... on the court.” - Katrina Adams, President, USTA
- “To win the US Open is magical and especially now it's just gotten bigger and better and you know the fans are rowdy here which I love.” - Billie Jean King, Founder, Women’s Tennis Association & US Open Champion
- “Fans really are electric and in New York I think it's a fascinating place to play tennis. If you play under the lights in New York I feel like you've achieved, so, I love it, I think the fans know I love it because I show them and I've had a lot of opportunities to play under the lights so I've been very fortunate in my life.” - Roger Federer, US Open Champion

Noteworthy Facts:

- The United States National Lawn Tennis Association (USNLTA) was formed in 1881 and held the first U.S. National Championship, the predecessor to the US Open, at the Newport Casino in Rhode Island that same year. Richard Sears was the first champion.
