

The U.S. and the Holocaust

How can we learn from the past? Acclaimed filmmaker Ken Burns asks that profound question in The U.S. and the Holocaust.

The three-part, six-hour series, directed by Burns, Lynn Novick, and Sarah Botstein, explores America's response to one of the greatest humanitarian crises of the 20th century. Inspired by the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum's "Americans and the Holocaust" exhibition, it examines the rise of Hitler and Nazism in Germany in the context of global antisemitism and racism, the eugenics movement in the United States, and race laws in the American south—revealing how as the Holocaust unfolded in Europe, the United States was unwilling to open its doors to more than a fraction of the hundreds of thousands of people seeking refuge.

Through firsthand testimony of witnesses and survivors who endured persecution and violence as their families tried to escape Hitler, the series delves into the tragic human consequences of public indifference, bureaucratic red tape, and restrictive quota laws in America. It tackles questions relevant to today's society, including how racism influences immigration and refugee policies, and how governments and people respond to authoritarian states.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Charles Lindbergh, and Henry Ford are among the historical figures in the film, as well as Anne Frank and her family, who applied for but failed to obtain visas to the U.S. before they went into hiding.

"While we rightly celebrate American ideals of democracy and our history as a nation of immigrants, we must also grapple with the fact that American institutions, like segregation and the brutal treatment of indigenous populations, were influential in Hitler's Germany," Ken Burns says. "And although we accepted more refugees than any other sovereign nation, America could have done so much more to help the millions of desperate people fleeing Nazi persecution."

GREAT PERFORMANCES — VERDI'S REQUIEM: THE MET REMEMBERS 9/11

Great Performances and The Metropolitan Opera present a special performance of Verdi's "Requiem," filmed live in 2021 to commemorate the 20th anniversary of the September 11 attacks. Conducted by Met Music Director Yannick Nézet-Séguin, it features the Met orchestra, chorus and soloists Ailyn Pérez, Michelle DeYoung, Matthew Polenzani, and Eric Owens (at right). Hosted by Misty Copeland from nearby the site of the 9/11 Memorial & Museum, it includes footage from the museum's archives, as well as New York City's Tribute in Light, a public art installation featuring two beams of light that reach up into the sky every year on September 11.
